A hundred collins, with German street mountings were brought in, placed upon the floor, who into them the unidentified and destitute dond were placed. Fifty-six hearnes and undertakers wagons drove up at the entraine on Adams street, and the remains were lifted in. There were two collins in each vehicle. Considerable delay in forming the procession was caused by the desire of persons in the Adams street morage to continue their efforts for the identification of their friends, and several additional bodies were recognized. The throng about the market was very large, and the most excitement prevailed. Shortly after one o'clo the ghastly procession started through Boer, place, and then entered Schermerhorn street. The following was the order of procession:

A mounted squad of policemen.
A number of carriages containing elergymen.

An escort of several regiments of militia, MajorGeneral Thomas S. Dakin in commund.
Relatives and near friends of the victims, all in carriages.

Officers of the city government and others to authority. As the hearses rolled down Flatbush avenue, one of the most conspicuous and often occurring sights was an old, large paster, with the ominous announcement: "Brooklyn theater—Last night of the Treo Orphause—Boers open at half-past seven o'clock."
